THE LOVE TEST,

Or, The

Sequel of a passionate Attachment.

Translated from the French.

By Rose Ashley.

'The course of true love never did run smooth.'—Shakspeare.

'The lady doth protest too much, me thinks.'—Hamlet.

(Concluded.]

'Enough sir, that they have determined my course and enabled me to withdraw any difficulty which my pretensions might have offered to your pursuit Of my reasons for this step I shall give no account, you have no right to demand them. I am aware, regarding her brother and sister as I do, what is my duty to them—I shall discharge that duty also. Sir I have the honor to wish you a very good morning.

With a low bow M. de Marsan took his departure leaving M. Dutilleul to his meditations.

Sharp physic is the last!
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it,
Fair glass of light, I loved you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stored with ill.
But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt,
For he's no Man on whom perfections wait
That knowing sin without, will touch the gate.

Good south. I care not for you:

Pericles. Prince of Tyre.

When left alone our passionate Leopold cast his eyes over his letter of defiance which lay still upon his bureau, and sat, striving to solve the mystery by which he was bewildered. What could be the secret of all this? Could it be that Cecile had informed de Marsan of his intended challenge? That was scarcely possible, nor was it probable that a big-whiskered captain of hussars would withdraw from the pursuit of such an object for fear of a fight. He must look for other clues. One thing was certain, it must be an important consideration which could make an ardent young man revolt at marriage with a damsel, beautiful rich and well connected. There was some monstrous mystery at the bottom! That was obvious the more he thought upon the matter. That he should fail to pierce it did not lessen its distressing difficulties. What cold M. de Marsan have found out. What blemish had he discovered? An intrigue perhaps—an error, most probably one of those criminal liasons which fasten with disgrace to a whole lifetime. however long and to the most lovely woman in spirit of all her charms. This was a terrible idea to be cherished by a lover. At first he rejected it with loathing but it returned with renewed force to its reflections, and he accustomed himself to its contations, which had lasted more than an hour he was disturbed by the receipt of a letter. It was from his beloved Cecile herself. Its contents ran thus,

'Dear Leopold.

Come to me, hasten! My father has at length listened to reason. One of two things is certain, either he has grown cold to M. de Marsan or at length feels that if he truly loves his his child, he must not seek to control her affections. Come to me then, for the moment is propitious.

Cecile."

'Indeed the moment is propitious!' uttered our Leopold, with something of a sneer upon his lips, as he read his precious little billet.

'Propitious! I can well believe it—but for whom? Not for me. One lover takes his flight, it is good policy to make sure of the other. One son-in-law off, it is best to lose no time in getting fast hold upon another. Is it so Mademoiselle Cecile? Verily, it has this complexion! Your father you tell me, has grown cold to de marsan. You do not tell all mademoiselle although you know much more. By this time you well know that de marsan himself flings your hand from him in scorn, and better informed than I am, you know his reason also for his rejection. Ah—a father who truly loves his daughter controls not her affections! Very good. But you forget fair lady, that you told me but yesterday that it would cause the death of this affectionate father if you did not expouse the son of his friend to pacify his affections though you sacrificed your own!'

M. Dutilleul succeeded most happily in persuading himself that he was obeyed and deceived. He saw it as clear as sunlight that they wished to make him their dupe among them, and in his suspicious eyes, the poor little Cecile was a thousand times more to blame than her father.

Leopold was not to be duped, he was too sagacious for such shallow plotting. No, no! Instead of hurrying at the moment to Cecile, he turned in to packing his trunks, and while Cecile was looking for him with all her eyes he set off for Paris. There he took a post chaise for Turin, all agog to visit an ancient uncle, for whom all of a sudden he felt a most filial interest. We shall say nothing about the events of his journey, enough that he reached Turin in safety, and had no reason to complain of his uncle's receptance.

IV.

Portia—Oh, these deliberate fools when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Nerissa—The ancient saying is no heresy,
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny,

Portia—Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

—Merchant of Venice.

It was some three months after, when a truant disposition took our devoted lover to the beautiful city of Tours.

Strolling one day deneath the noble avenues of trees which line its ancient streets, he caught a glimpse of an officer of hussars—that hateful uniform. The person was approaching him. The air and manner seemed familiar.

As he drew nigh the doubts of Leopold vanished, and he recognized the generous M. de Marsan, who having determined that the grapes were sour, so kindly gave him notice that he might pluck and eat. Leopold felt his kindness and—was free to acknowledge them. The first civilities over, he proceeded frankly after the following fashion—

'And now my dear de Marsan, now that I have the pleasure of meeting you at a moment when both of us are calm and indifferent, be pleased to explain.'

'De Marsan.' exclaimed the hussar. while an uncontrollable laughter shook his manly person, 'my good sir, you are mistaaken in your person, you see in me. not M de Marsan. but his friend captain Dubois. sir, Dubois!' and the laughter was resumed.

'How sir? Ha?' exclaimed Leopold, angrily.

The other laughed still more, but during his merriment resumed:

'You seek an explanation, M. Dutilleul you shall have it. You could not, fortunately addressed yourself to one, more capable of giving it. I am sure I shall be able to reveal the whole mystery to your satisfaction. I am the brother, sir, of Cebois. That damsel really loved you, but my father wished to form a union between her and my friend M. de Marsan. This desire was mine also. My sister, however, firmly resisted our wishes, insisting that you bore for her a love which nothing could eradicate or enfeeble. Well sir, I doubted this, and proposed to test the strength of your passion. She consented My task was easy. By imposing upon you my own person as that of M de Marsan, I proved to cecile how little she could rely upon your stability. You know the sequel quite as well as myself. I have but to add that M de marsan himself arrived at Versailles but a few days after your departure. Handsome, amiable, noble. he found no difficulty in rendering himself pleasing to Cecile, and a month since she became his wife. Are you now satisfied sir?'

Leopold was very far from being satisfied but his was one of those in which a man is compelled to stomach what he cannot well digest. He was angry enough to have swallowed alive the sagacious strategist captain of hussars, and would have fought him cheerfully but for the additional fruit by which his disgrace and defeat would be only rendered more notorious. We may fancy that he soon cut short this interview, that he left the good town of Tours, with its fine trees, with all expedition, and made a secret vow never to see Versailles again as long as she lived. It may interest his many friends to know that that he finally settled in Turin.

THE CONFESSION.

There's somewhat on my breast, father,
There's somewhat on my breast!
The livelong day I sigh, father,
At night I cannot rest,
I cannot take my rest father,
Though I would fain do so,
A weary weight oppresseses me!
This weary weight of wo!

'Tis not the lack of gold, father,
Nor lack of worldly gear!
My lands are broad and fair to see
My friends are kind dear,
My kin are real true, father,
The mourn to see my grief,
But, O! 'tis not a kinsman's hand
Can give my heart relief,

Tis not that Janet's false, father,
Tis not that she's unkind,
Though busy flatters swarm around,
I know her constant mind,
Tis not HER coldness father,
That chills my laboring breast,
It's that confounded cucumber
I've ate and can't digest.

CASS AND TAYLOR,—'Will you] take the life of Taylor or Cass, this morning madame?' said a small boy to our good Aunt Betsey.

No my lad,' she replied, they may live untill the end of their days for me, I've got nothing against 'em!'

EMPHATIC,—I hold says a western editor, with dignified emphasis and striking attitude, 'I hold it as a self-evident principle, that no man should take a news paper three consecutive years without at least making an apology to the editor for paying for it."

The virtuous only are truly happy.

'Will you be after telling us what's the time Patrick,' asked Tim of of his friend the other day, 'An' sure I'd do it but the watch is most two days too fast,' was the reply.

'If you don't give me a penny,' said a young hopeful to his mamma, 'I know a boy that's got the measles, and I'll go an' catch em, so I will.'

From the Rio De La Plata, By an arriva at Salem the Buenos Ayres Packet of July 29 just one week later than the previous advices has been received. The paper however, contains nothing of note, except official notifications of a decree issued by Governor Rosas, prohibiting all intercourse with the British and French squadrons, except the embarkation of provision for the former is permitted. The prohibition is put on the ground that the blockade of the ports occupied by General Oriee is still continued by the French and that the raising of the blockade by the British has been effected in such a manner as 'to give no satisfaction and make no reparation for those grievous offences and inquires' originally committed in the institution of the blockade.

WASHINGTON CITY D. C.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 21. 1848.

FANATICISM—ABOLITION—CHURCH & STATE.

When we see a deadly blow aimed at the liberty of our country whether under a respectable religious, or political cloak we give no quarter.

With the freedom of opinion we never interfere. It is our pride and our privilege to defend the civil and religious rights of our country.

Every man has a right to worship God as he chooses, whether as a Catholic. Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Jew or Gentile, or any denomination whatever in this country. We are led to these remarks by the high-handed movements of a party calling themselves 'Free Soil' party—alias Church and State. who have as we foretold united with colored people to carry out their object (as yet a secret) under a sham pretext

The subject we allude to is from the 'New York Herald' of the 9th inst.

"THE GREAT ABOLITION MOVEMENT—THE MANIFESTO of THE Negroes.

The grand abolition movements of the day, which is now agitating the Northern States, is of a mixed complexion, with a slice of black and a slice of white, in somewhat unequal proportions. Heretofore most attention has been paid to the white slice, which has been represented ceiefly by John Van Buren, of Kinderhook. the meeting which was held the other day in the Park—and a great meeting it was, of from seven to ten thousand people. The manifesto which we publish in our columns this day, which has been issued by a colored convention held at Cleveland ohio, comprehends the views and purposes of the colored race themselves, or of the black streak of abolitionism in the North. It is signed by Frederick Douglas, [it will be recollected is a colored man, and spoke at the Buffalo Convention] and several other persons. Douglas, it may be remembered has been in the newspapers in former days, has, like John Van Buren, travelled in England some years ago, and has made himself notorious in several ways. By his activity and talents, he has been keeping up the agitation among the colored people in the North. originally he was a slave in the south but took to his heels one day and somehow made his escape. He is now the great leader of the colored abolition section of the North, and may be considered as the compeer of John Van Buren, the big gun of the white section of the same party.

The manifesto put forth by these colored people as quite a curiosity in literature, philosophy and shaving. In all the speeches proceeding from John Van Buren, that orator generally confines himself to the subject of the exclusion of slavery from California, and the organization of a party at the North, founded upon sentiments of hostility towards Southern slavery as a political or social element."

The comments of that King of ways Mr. Bennet on the hinted amalgation of colors. and the proposition of Mr Douglas to his fellow countrymen to black no more boots—as barbers to shave

"Then you would tolerate error," said a Hartford lady to us some years since. "No madam. But I tolerate the freedom of opinion, who made you a judge of errors," so we said then, and always.

no beards, nor carry no carpet bags," is funny enough.

But here is the manifesto, we find it in the New York Herald, but can only afford room for a few extracts,

GRAND ABOLITION MOVEMENT.

MANIFESTO OF THE BLACK CONVENTION HELD IN OHIO.

To the Colored People of the United States.—

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN.—Under a solemn sense of duty, inspired by our relation to you as fellow sufferers under the multiplied grevious wrongs to which we as a people are universally subjected—we a portion of your brethren assembled in National Convention, at cleveland, Ohio, take the to address you on the subject of our improvement and social elvation.

The condition of variety of the human family has long been cheerless, if not hopelese, in this country. The doctrine perseveringly proclaimed in high places, in church and state, that it is impossible for colored men to rise from ignorance and debasement, to intelligence and respectability in this country, has made a deep impression upon the public mind generally, and is not without its effect upon us. Under this gloomy doctrine, many of us have sunk under the pall of despondency, and are making no effort to relieve ourselves, and have no heart to assist others. It is from this despond that we would deliver you. It is from this slumber we would rouse you. The present is a period of activity and hope. The heavens above us are bright, and much of the darkness that overshadowed us has passed away. We can deal in the language of brilliant encouragement, and speak of success with certainty. That our condition has been gradually improving is evident to all, and that we shall yet stand on a common platform with our fellowcountrymen, in respect to political and social rights is certain."

* * * *

"We shall yet stand on a common platform with our fellow countrymen in respect to politics and social rights, is certain."

We ask the gentleman if he will be satisfied with that? will he not want to go farther, in imitation of the blacks of St. Domingo?

"Mountains of prejudice have been removed and truth and light are despelling the error and darkness of ages: The time was when we trembled in the presence of a white man, and dared not assert, or even ask for our rights, but would be guided directed, and governed, in any way we were demanded, without ever stopping to inquire whether we were right or wrong we were not only slaves, but our ignorance made us willing slaves, many of us uttered complaints against the faithful abolitionist, for the broad assertion of our rights though. they went too far, and were only making our condition worse. This sentiment has nearly ceased to reign in the dark abodes of our hearts, we began to see our wrongs as clearly. and comprehend our rights as fully. and as well as our white countrymen."

"Mountains of prejudice have been removed." Not so. mountains of prejudice have fallen upon our once happy and independent country from that deplorable ignorance that shrouds our land, of which this manifesto—in one of our oned gallant and enterprizing States is sufficient evidence—not that we blame Mr Douglas, but those who are making a tool of him.

'Dispelling error and darkness' indeed a poor deluded set of fanatics, bought up in ignorance under the tuition of bigoted sectarians who claim to be the only true church on earth.' Let the cholera come into the country and you will see the truth of their church as we have seen once before, when they fled like the cow—and Santa Anna before Gen. Taylor, and left the Catholics to bury their dead and nurse their sick.

But we will make two more extracts from the manifesto,

"But fellow countrymen, it is not so much our purpose to cheer you by the progress we have already made as it is to stimulate you to still higher attainments. We have done much but there is much more to be done. While we have undoubtedly great cause to thank God and take courage for the hopeful changes which have taken place in our condition we are not without cause to mourn over the sad condition which we yet occupy. We are yet the most oppressed people in the world In the southern states of this Union we are held as slaves. All over that wide region our paths are marked with blood. Our backs are yet scared by the lash, and our souls are yet dark under the pall of slavery. our sisters are sold for the purposes of pollution, and our brethren are sold in the market with beasts of burden. Shut up in the prison house of bondage. denied all rights and deprived of all privileges, we are blotted from the page of human existence, and placed beyond the limits of humen regard. Death, moral death, has palsied our souls in that quarter, and we are a murdered people.'

Every one can see what this means. It is meant to excite, who would not feel resentment at such acts of cruelty were it true.

Under such fierce leaders as they have fanaticism in the absence of reason, might be excited beyond all bounds. It is evident that these exciting expressions, and the whole affair of this colored convention is a concerted plot of the great enemy of american liberty. Finding themselves baffled in all other attempts, to gain power to wreck their vengeance upon 'Heroes as enemies of God,' who dared to think for themselves.

Their troops, 'Gods army,' it appears from the number of free soil papers, will be composed of the descendants of the Pilgrim fathers who butchered innocent men, women, and children, in this very country, and chasing respectable people out of their beds at midnight, like so many blood hounds to 'serve the Lord.'

What fun they will have when the colored people and they form the grand army of 'occupation' properly organized, and officered exSenator Ewing of Ohio will probably be the commander in chief, and their 'Moses's' and their 'Aarons' will no doubt come from the last.

Mr Douglas advises to stick to their white brethren, and act with them in all things. He is vehement on this point.

Absurd as all this may seem we advise those who value their liberty, their lives, and their property to keep a watchful eye upon those proceedings. No one knows what power may unite with them. Power that yet lies concealed waiting for a favorable opportunity; and will avail themselves of it. They have that deadly hatred of heart against their fellowman that time cannot conquer, this is well known. You often hear them talk (that is in their papers) of collections for charitable, and many institutions, good people give them money but you never see them do a charitable act, so far from it—if they ever feel delight, it is while engaged in acts of cruelty, principally against women and children. cruelty, crime, and avirice is their ruling principle. Alas! mankind has ever been so since the children of Adam were born.

It is enough to congeal ones blood to think of it! That in a country like this on every ground the very gardenspot of the world. Remote from monarchs, wars and strife. The earth and sea flooded with plenty—large enough for all to have his share, every one has the privilege to worship God in peace, under his own vine, and his own Figtree yet they are hunting each other like beasts of prey.

In the Convention that now addresses you, there there has been much said upon the subject of labor and especially those departments of it with which we, as a class have been long indentified. You will see by the resolutions there adopted on that subject, that the convention regarded those employments though right in themselves, as being nevertheless, degrading to us as a class, and therefore, counseled us to abandon the them as speedily as possible and to seek what is called the more respectable employments. While the convention do not inculcate the doctrine that any kind of menial toil is in itself dishonorable, or that colored persons are to be exempt from what is called menial employments, they do mean to say that such employments have been so long and universally filled by colored men, as to become a badge of degradation, in that it has established the conviction that colored men are only fit for such employments. We therefore, advise by all means to cease from such employments, as practible.

From the Daily Union of 16th inst.

'As we are preparing for press our friends democracy of Washington, are firing 200 guns, and holding a large and animated meeting in honor of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

On! Mr. Ritchie, the Whigs fired their guns, and it is said were on tears.

The whigs, too, have had a procession of their own, but it appeared to us neither very numerous nor brilliant.

BROWNSVILLE, (Penn.) Oct. 16, 1848.

To to the Editor of Union:

If you will note particularly the returns of western Pennsylvania, you will find that we have given at least the usual democratic vote, with the exception of one or two counties. Greene, Fayette, Washington, Somerset, Westmoreland, Beaver, Butler, Mercer, Crawford, Venango, and others have given as large majorities in the aggregate as they did for Mr. Polk in 1844 The only remarkable exception is Allegheny, which is easily accounted for. Johnson received about 2,700 majority—Middleworth and the legislature and county ticket 1,900, which is between 300 and 400 less than Mr. Clay received in 1844. The reason of Johnson being 800 ahead is that he received the native and free-soil vote, which for Congress was 850. Here is the whole mystery.

Pennsylvania had been carried by a very small majority for the native abolition whig candidate, by native abolition votes by concentrating all the issues in the state, Wilmotism and all, and primps some democratic votes in the iron and coal counties, in the central and eastern portion of the state.

We have doubtless gained a member of Congress (Alfred Gilmore) in the west. The west will not swerve, but will come up to her whole duty in November. She has done well and will do better.

Truly yours, &c.

O, Mr Ritchie, Mr Ritchie, O. Is that really you?

"Neither very numerous, nor very brilliant." why the whigs had 20 transparances. But we give it up since our friend says the whigs had a majority of one in Pennsylvania.

THE AURORA.

The time is fast aproaching when the American people will be called upon to exercise their constiutional rights in chousing a President and Vice President for four years, the two highest offices within the gift of a free people, and it behooves every friend of constitutional liberty to be on the alert to combat federalism and sustain the honor and glory of our country.

The AURORA will defend the principles of the Democratic party and will advocate the great Democratic elements of Republican government. The blessings of government like the 'dews of heaven,' should descend equally upon all, it is not instituted for the benefit of partican at families or classes, whether of royal or plebeian blood, to the exclusion of the great masses of the people, who support in peace and its honor in war. In fere the Auror will be essentially Democratic the Constitution will be its guide, and it will religiously adhere to that sacred instrum ent as the sheet anchor of the Union.

It will watch with unceasing vigilance every movement of the federal party seat of government, whether secret or open, and give information thereof to the great democratic family of the Union, that it may thwart the machinations, deceptions, frauds and falsehoods, by which self-styled whiggery now becomes more treasonable than Hartford Convention federalism—endeavors to impose upon the people. And it will exert to the utmost of its abilities the dissemination, throughout the Union, those principles which prompt every man deserving the proud title of a citizen of the United States of America to stand by and defend his country and its Constitution, beleiving that the perpetuity of our republican institutions can only be insured by a triumph of democratic principle at the next general election.
